Highlights of the Week

Helping Communities Recover from Hurricane Matthew

On Thursday, Gov. Cooper traveled to Fair Bluff to thank students and staff of Columbus Career and College Academy (CCCA) for their volunteerism during and after Hurricane Matthew. Amid the devastation from Matthew, CCCA acted as a Red Cross emergency shelter, taking in neighbors affected by the hurricane. The governor also visited residents at a housing complex that recently reopened after being severely damaged in Hurricane Matthew.

"Help can't come quick enough for those who have been left homeless from a hurricane," Cooper said. "The recovery process is long and we still have a lot more work to do. We need to get people back into their former homes or into new, safer homes."

6 Million Meals for Meals on Wheels

On Wednesday, Gov. Cooper and First Lady Kristin Cooper delivered the 6 millionth meal with the Meals on Wheels program in Winston-Salem. The governor and first lady met with Rosalie Young, a Meals on Wheels recipient, and talked with her about the importance of the program to seniors across North Carolina. Gov. Cooper also recognized the hard work of the many volunteers who fight hunger statewide.

"These volunteers knock on people's doors and they visit them and deliver nutrition," Gov. Cooper said. "But they offer kindness and friendship and companionship and deliver a message on behalf of this community that we care about you."

Protecting Our Drinking Water

On Thursday, Gov. Cooper vetoed House Bill 56, arguing that the legislation only symbolically addresses unregulated, emerging contaminants in North Carolina's drinking water. HB 56 does not provide resources to state agencies whose mission is to protect drinking water from illegal chemicals. The bill also unduly rolls back environmental protections regarding landfills, river basins and beaches.

"This cynical legislation fails to address the concerns of families in the Cape Fear region and does nothing to protect drinking water statewide going forward," said Gov. Cooper.

NC Joins U.S. Climate Alliance

This week, Gov. Cooper announced that North Carolina will join the U.S. Climate Alliance, a bipartisan coalition currently made of 15 states that are committed to reducing their share of U.S. greenhouse gas emissions.

"Clean air and a healthy environment are vital for a strong economy and a healthier future," Gov. Cooper said. "So much of North Carolina's economy relies on protecting our treasured natural resources, and I'm committed to maintaining the quality of their air we breathe for generations to come."

This is just the latest action taken by the Cooper Administration to help combat climate change. Gov. Cooper recently signed into law House Bill 589, Competitive Energy Solutions for North Carolina, which will roughly double North Carolina's solar generation over the next four years.

Wishing Livingstone College Students Well at Fall Convocation

On Friday, Gov. Cooper traveled to Salisbury to deliver a fall convocation address to students and faculty at Livingstone College, a historically black college. During his remarks, the governor encouraged students set intentions for the upcoming schoolyear and the years to follow.

"Living with purpose means something different for every person," Gov. Cooper said. "I'd like to share with you what living a life of purpose means to me, and then I'd like to challenge you to think about what it means to you."

Maria destroys homes, triggers flooding

Category 4 hurricane knocks out power all across Puerto Rico

BY JAMES HAMILTON
Winston-Salem Journal

Winston-Salem, N.C. — The strongest hurricane to hit Puerto Rico in more than 60 years devastated the island's infrastructure, knocked out power across the entire island and caused some areas, including the capital, to be cut off from the rest of the island.

Leaving almost 3 million people dead in its wake across the Caribbean, Maria hit Puerto Rico as a Category 4 storm with winds of 155 mph. It pummeled the island of 3.4 million people with life-threatening winds for several hours, the worst since 1955 when the U.S. territory began its independence.

People of Puerto Rico and the family have lived through at least 19 big hurricanes and many smaller ones in the history of the island, but they agree both Maria and Irma were unprecedented in their magnitude.

Quake relief push begins

Local groups plan to send water, food and other vital aid

Local churches and the American Red Cross are beginning their relief efforts to help earthquake victims in Mexico.

A 7.3 magnitude earthquake struck central Mexico on Tuesday, killing at least 250 people. Police, firefighters and ordinary citizens dug through the rubble of collapsed schools, houses and apartment buildings Wednesday, looking for survivors.

Tuesday's quake struck on the 10th anniversary of the 2005 earthquake in Mexico that killed about 15,000 people.

The San Marcos Evangelical Church in Kernersville said it spoke with church leaders Wednesday and discussed how they can help the earthquake victims in Mexico.

The church is already planning to send food and water to the affected areas, he said.

"It's a very sad situation," he said. "There is no doubt that we will be involved in the right thing to do."

He said Western is suffering from Tuesday's quake just as relief work that happened Sept. 7 in the country's south. That 8.1 magnitude quake killed at least 10 people and destroyed a large part of the city.

Winston-Salem, N.C. — Gen. Ray Cooper, 81, said he was proud to be part of the 10th anniversary of the Meals on Wheels program, which has served more than 6 million meals to the elderly in the city.

But the Wednesday was a little different. The man who served in the U.S. Army and was called the "General" of the city.

A look at the city's history of food and nutrition, Cooper said, was a key part of the program's success.

"There are a lot of people who are in need of food and nutrition," Cooper said.

Cooper said it took a lot of people to make the day successful.

Winston-Salem, N.C. — James Corbett died because he allegedly threatened to kill Thomas Corbett and Molly Corbett, leaving his wife and father-in-law in a state of shock and grief.

The Corbetts' death was the result of a long and painful process of his own negligence and his wife's negligence.

ROY COOPER

The latest proposal to repeal the Affordable Care Act may be even worse than previous proposals: raising premiums, weakening protections for people with pre-existing conditions, and slashing over $1 billion from North Carolina's Medicaid program. North Carolina's middle-class families will be worse off if this passes.

Senate Republicans in Washington must work with Democrats to reach a bipartisan solution that expands health care coverage and makes it better.
